Cape Breton Pride: Everyday People

by Peter Steele

Here it is, June already! Of course, that means a summer of Pride week festivities is about to take off in a flourish across Atlantic Canada and the rest of the country. It's always a great time to celebrate who we are with old friends and new, as well as the communities that not only welcome who we are, but are proud to be apart of our celebrations. In recent years we've certainly enjoyed a number of accomplishments, especially in the political arena, but despite those wins and our growing visibility, homophobia still exists. Pride week celebrations today need to be more than just the fanfare and the good times. With communities like Truro, Antigonish and Pictou turning back the hands of time it's important that we continue to make a statement about who we are, and who we are meant to be. With understanding comes true acceptance, so it is our duty to walk everyone down that beautiful road to enlightenment, and boy, have we done a great job decorating that road!

Here, in the Cape Breton Regional Municipality (CBRM), we are so fortunate to have a municipal council and an extensive business community, always proud to be a part of celebrating our diversity. Their tremendous support is an important part of our week-long festival, as well as the comfortable lifestyle we appreciate here all year long.

Everyday People, this year's Pride Week festival in the CBRM, will be held August 9 to 16. Activities will include some of last year's events and a few new ones. With our parade included as part of Action Week's ending ceremonies, everyone will be looking forward to this year's pageantry (August 10) throughout downtown Sydney. Our Grand Marshall this year is Bette MacDonald, the pride of Cape Breton, and one of Atlantic Canada's most successful comedians.

Everyone is welcome to stroll in our parade, and groups should be in touch with us to reserve a great spot. The post-parade barbecue party is sure to attract a huge gath-

Right Reverend Bishop John Spong in Halifax

By Jane MacConnell, Board Member, Safe Harbour MCC

Bishop John Shelby Spong on Saturday June 7, 2008 at the Bella Rose Arts Centre, 283 Thomas Raddall Drive (New Halifax West High School) at 7:00 p.m. Tickets are $20 each and are available by calling (902) 832-9100 or emailing: spong_hfx_tickets@ns.sympatico.ca.

Spong is a retired Episcopalian Bishop from Newark, New Jersey and has been a lightning rod for gay, lesbian and transgendered issues within the Church. He has written many scholarly books about religion. In fact, a number of his books question the tenets of Christianity. His latest book, "Jesus for the Non-Religious," paints a strikingly new and different portrait of Jesus of Nazareth. In it, Spong challenges much of the traditional understanding of the Jesus of history, from his miraculous birth to a virgin to the account of his cosmic ascension into the sky at the end of his life, as well as other doctrinal supernatural events. Bishop Spong proposes a new way of understanding the divinity of Christ: it's not what you believe; rather it's how you live your life. Traditional Christians who still cling to dated concepts of the past will not be comfortable with this lecture.

Safe Harbour invited Bishop Spong to Halifax because of his progressive Christianity and staunch support of LGBT issues. Bishop Spong has been in religious hot water many times. Most recently, it was his September, 2007 letter to Dr. Rowan Williams, Archbishop of Canterbury and head of the Episcopal Church, which landed him in the middle of another controversy. In the letter Bishop Spong attacked the Archbishop for his handling of the so-called "gay crisis" in the Anglican Communion. Bishop Spong indicated that Dr. Williams, the Archbishop, is a hypocrite, "... displaying breathtaking ineptitude and moral weakness." Apparently

Cumberland County Council Flag Flip

By Gerard Veldhoven

Cumberland County Council recently changed its flag policy in an obvious attempt to halt the request by Cumberland Pride to hoist the rainbow flag during Pride week in July. It made perfect sense to hold the ceremony the same day Amherst Town Council will host the ceremony. However, council unanimously voted to change flag policy, joining the homophobic stances taken by Pictou, Truro and Antigonish councils.

A formal request was sent to County Council to raise the flag and to proclaim Pride week. After two months no reply was forthcoming, so another letter was sent out. A week later Stephen Ferguson, Director of Policy and Research, wrote back and indicated council members were working on deciding what to do about changing policy and promised to inform Cumberland Pride immediately. The Amherst Daily News reported the change in policy and Cumberland Pride has yet to be notified of the decision.

It has become a typical occurrence and the reasons for this are varied. However, upon reading the excuses, we soon learn it is all about discrimination against the queer community. These homophobic members of council are running scared they may not be elected again. So be it, but in the meantime they are allowed to legally discriminate against our community. It cannot, and must not continue, and hopefully the Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission will become involved in making a ruling that will encompass all of Nova Scotia, not just individual jurisdictions. These council members must be stopped in their tracks if we are to enjoy the rights we have fought for during the past years.

Thankfully, the Town of Amherst is ready to host the flag raising ceremony on July 7 in front of Town Hall. Unfortunately, county members of the GLBT community must wait, but the time will come to make these celebrations a yearly event in all communities across Nova Scotia. A number of ill-minded politicians will not get the upper hand. In the meantime, all are welcome to Amherst to help us celebrate.

Halifax Pride's Community Fair

By Ramona Westgate

In celebration of Halifax Pride Festival's 20th anniversary, we plan to make this year's Pride celebrations bigger and better than ever. In addition to the concert and beer tent, we are expanding the post-parade attractions at the Pride Festival site. The Community Fair will consist of more vendors, more community groups, and activities for all ages. We are even looking at holding competitions such as "The Gayest Dog" at the post-parade celebrations.

Our goal is to have more activities for Pride-goers and their families to participate in. We are also planning to expand on the available space to include as many agencies as possible that provide services to our community, such as sister Pride organizations, GLBT health and well-being agencies, and sports and recreation groups. It is our vision that Pride-goers would have the opportunity to walk around the Community Fair and learn about services and activities available to them throughout the Atlantic Provinces.

...competitions such as "The Gayest Dog"

The Community Fair is a work in progress, and we would appreciate feedback from the community as to what they would like to see. For comments, suggestions, or to register your organization for the Community Fair, please e-mail me at ramona@halifaxpride.ca.

Rainbow Proud in Truro

By Paula Arsenault

Rainbow Proud is the LGBT community of Truro and surrounding areas, an organizational group that meets to plan activities such as parades, outings, dances and more. We meet the first Sunday of each month; however, we are taking a break during summer months. We could always use some more help, so if you are interested in joining our group or if you are looking for information about the LGBT community contact us by e-mail at rainbowproud@hotmail.com. Our website is in the works so send an email and to be kept up-to-date.

Truro Pride is a social group that gathers on Wednesday evenings at the Fair Trade Cafe, Prince Street in Truro. Look for our group—wearing blue t-shirts and perhaps a few rainbows too—marching in the July 1 Diversity Parade in Bible Hill. We have t-shirts in all sizes with our logo for sale for $15. They will be available at all our upcoming events or contact the group to get yours.

The next Rainbow Proud dance will be held Saturday, June 28, at the Truro Lions Club, 1100 Prince St. The event begins at 8:00 p.m. and will run through 12 midnight. The cost is $8.00 at the door, and the event is for those 19 and older.

On July 12, canoe the Stewiacke River with your friends. We need some men this year to add to our canoe pack. Guys, be brave and join us women on the river! An added bonus this year will be a barbeque at the Stewiacke River Park for when we get out of the water. E-mail rainbowproud@hotmail.com for details.

BLT Women of Halifax Road Trip

By Sue Andrews, Karen Clarke, Sharon Chiasson

The BLT Women of Halifax group recently took a road trip to Moncton, its purpose being to get rid of the winter blahs and just have fun. The BLT group is made up of lesbians, bisexual and transgender women; but events like this are amazing just because we are all just women having fun, no matter the logistics. The facilitators of the group see the strong bonds of friendship being built between the women. Friendships are not always easy, especially when you have been hurt in the past. This type of event is very important to the group and the members.

The plans were set in motion, but the first date for the road trip to Moncton was cancelled because of a storm. The next date for the event was April 26. The hotel was booked, the cars were filled with gas and off to Moncton we went. When we all arrived we went out to dinner and enjoyed great food and conversation. Afterward, we went to the hotel to get ready for the evening out at Triangles. When a group of diverse women get together its very interesting to see how the communication of the conversation is. In the BLT group it is truly amazing to see everyone just being themselves, without judgment and just unconditional acceptance of each other. When we arrived at Triangle we were welcomed with open arms. We played pool and dance the night away, then continued the party with pizza after arriving back at the hotel around 2:00 a.m.

This event was a great success. I am sure we will be laughing about this road trip for years to come.

ISCANS News

By Ed Savage

As a lot of you are aware, ISCANS is the Imperial Sovereign Court of Atlantic, Nova Society, an organization that raises much needed funds for charity. We hold events every week to raise money. In April, our Empress, BoomBoom, along with Dowager empress Natasha N, represented Halifax in Calgary at Coronation 32. Empress IV and VIII BoomBoom and Regent Emperor VIII Cousin Cletus also represented Halifax in Edmonton for Coronation.

In May, ISCANS held a number of events, starting with Just for Laughs on May 4, the King and Queen of Diamonds show on May 11, a theme night on May 17 at Blue Moon, and Natasha's birthday on May 25, all very well received with lots of funds raised. On May 19 we also held our Community Appreciation Barbeque, an annual event held every Victoria Day. Many thanks to all who came out to support us.

In June we will hold our annual ICP Ball at Reflections Cabaret.

Come out and support our ICP's VIII DynaMight, Rouge Fatale, Shane Jefferies, and David Cosens (what a team!) It should be fun. There will be a weekly show held at the Blue Moon every Sunday night in June. As well, look for our Empress and Emperor Cousin Cletus and the team out doing "Buck a Suck." If they approach you and ask you to buy a sucker, please do so, as all the money goes to charity.

ISCANS would like to thank everyone for their support and remind you to mark your calendars for Coronation 2009, which will be held on February 7, 2009 at the Holiday Inn on Robie St., Halifax.

ering, so come out for some great food and entertainment.

Gay Bingo will be replaced this year with a special drag show extravaganza hosted by our own Darren McKinnon. Robert Barrie, Donna Cameron and other guests will deliver a wonderful night of entertainment at our MusicFest on August 15, and we will celebrate the life of the late Heath Ledger with a screening of "Brokeback Mountain" during our free movie night on August 12. Other movie titles will be posted on our website soon.

Baseball will return once again, and this year will mark the inaugural awarding of the Pride Friendship Memorial Trophy in memory of our fellow Cape Bretoners who we've lost over the years. The Family Arcade and Picnic is always a special event, and everyone is certainly welcome. Be sure to bring the kids. Our Pride Dance has been switched to Friday night, August 15, so everyone can better enjoy the Beach Party, which takes place the next day, on August 16. As there is every year, and thanks to our numerous sponsors, there will be prizes and give-aways at our events. Of course, more activities are still being finalized, and they will be listed at www.pridecapebreton.com.

We're always looking for volunteers for Pride Week, so if you're interested in getting involved with your community, email us at info@pridecapebreton.com, or contact a board member. So let me take this opportunity to invite everyone to visit us for Pride Week in Cape Breton this summer. The hospitality is always warm and friendly. After all, this is Cape Breton! Come and enjoy yourself with some great everyday people.

Dr. Williams, prior to becoming the Archbishop, held enlightened and welcoming views and opinions regarding homosexuality, but when he was appointed the Archbishop of Canterbury, he chose the unity of the church above the truth regarding the sexual preferences of some of the clergy leadership. This hypocrisy so infuriated Bishop Spong that he threatened to "out" all the closeted gay bishops within the Anglican Church and the Church of England. Thus Bishop Spong has been blamed for further poisoning the tempestuous relationship between the US Church and the Anglican Communion. We at Safe Harbour welcome Bishop Spong and hope the lecture will bring about meaningful dialogue between the spiritual and the secular.

Safe Harbour will also be hosting Bishop Spong at our 11:00 a.m. Sunday worship service on June 8, at 3115 Veith St., Halifax. All are welcome.

EGALE AGM in St John's

Gay Teens Surveyed Feel Unsafe in School

...we as a society have learned that homophobic bullying and name-calling is a significant problem in schools

By Susan Rose

Egale Canada released the results of phase one of the first ever national School Survey addressing homophobia and transphobia in Canadian schools at a press conference in St. John's, Friday May 9. The survey polled 1200 students from across the country and the results are based on those who self-identified as LGBTQ or straight and who were enrolled in school in the last year.

Over two-thirds of LGBTTIQ participants reported that they felt unsafe at school, compared to 1 in 5 straights participants. Almost a third (31%) reported having rumours spread about them on the internet and 41% had been sexually harassed.

The survey is designed to explore the experiences of homophobia and transphobia of students in grades 8 to 12 in Canadian schools. The aim of the project is to document the realities of life at school for straight, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, Two Spirit, intersex, queer, and questioning (LGBTTIQ) students in Canada, including kids of gay parents, with the goal of providing policy makers and educators with information that will help them make schools safer and more respectful.

In recent years we as a society have learned that homophobic bullying and name-calling is a significant problem in schools here in Canada. It is not just LGBTTIQ students who are victimized. Students with same sex parents, and straight students are also affected.

The "Jubran case" for example where the Supreme Court of British Columbia ruled that the school Board had failed to protect a heterosexual student from years of homophobic name calling. In fact, this form of abuse is so common that students can hear "fag" or "gay" and other terms used as insults up to 75times every day at school.

Helen Kennedy, executive director of Egale said the education system is failing our youth. The results of the survey are extremely disturbing. Almost 40 per cent of straight students reported that they had made homophobic remarks sometimes or frequently.

Studies show that students subjected to homophobia have higher rates of depression, suicidal thoughts, alcohol and drug abuse, and drop out rates. In Canadian society we've come so far with respect to human rights, why is the school environment so unsafe for LGBTTIQ students? Kennedy said the problem is being ignored by the very people who are there to protect the kids. She feels teachers aren't being adequately trained to deal with the issue. Egale is working with teacher colleges to help them develop courses dealing with homophobia. The second phase of the survey will be launched in the fall. It is available on line at www.climatesurvey.ca.

Egale held its Annual General Meeting in St. John's, Saturday May 10th where members elected a new board. The focus for the board this year will be issues facing the trans community and the Safe School Campaign.

Crawford Hastie's KIBITZ AND BITCH

Hello Tom!

Thank you for the lovely birthday card and yes it did arrive on time. I presume a present will also arrive shortly? Parcel post is notoriously slower than regular mail, I know. So thoughtful of you, Tommo and with hardly any hints from me. The celebrations were the usual high spirited and friend-filled occasions. I do enjoy being fêted and it makes my circle of bosom pals so happy too. Dr. Martini invited me to dinner at his house where we had Gibson martinis – you know with the little pickled onions – as our pre-dinner drinks while he whipped up one of his usual fabulous culinary delights in the kitchen: Italian Chili with pepperoni. You can't beat a good sausage.

The following night I enjoyed another delicious dinner in my honour at the Anthill and Fisherman's Freud's house. By some arcane arithmetic the Anthill decided that this year was my champagne birthday and so she, FF and I shared a bottle of bubbly. I forbore from pointing out that we have been drinking champers at my birthday – and on many other occasions – for the last decade. It might have seemed ungrateful or worse, discouraged her from continuing the tradition. For several days in a row I received amusing birthday cards and phone messages– Monsieur Montréal called to wish me Bonne Fête - and even virtual gifts with automated messages on Facebook, which a more cynical nature than mine might regard as lacking in effort and enthusiasm.

All in all, the birthday provided a little oasis of pleasure in an otherwise very weird week. It all began with a tiny glitch on my computer system that required me to contact the support network. They needed to take over remote control of my computer to fix the little problem. Eight hours later Chandra and Prakash, my very polite and patient support team, had both given up. Apologetically they told me they had put in a temporary security system - rigged up with the technological equivalent of two rubber bands and a paper clip, I think – and said they'd send me a disk to complete the installation.

The following day I needed to go to the DMV to get my driver's license renewed. This simple procedure took over two hours since they too had some computer issues. Of the four stations, one was already out of order when I arrived and only two cameras were working. My frustration and pent up anger were not soothed during my sojourn in bureaucracy when over the increasingly loud mutterings of discontent from the public I kept hearing, "Oh dear. I've never seen that screen before. What do I do now?" I stuck it out though, Tom, and for once my license has a photo that doesn't look like it was taken at gunpoint. But a pattern began to emerge. I had to go to the income tax office three times because I had the wrong documents. Twice. On spring clean up day instead of my landlord's old suitcase with a broken zipper being taken out to the roadside, my brand new suitcase got put out by mistake where it was grabbed up like a twink at a bathhouse. The next night, just before going to bed I knocked a bottle of grapeseed oil off the shelf in the kitchen– slippery oil and jagged shards of glass everywhere.

To take my mind off of the jinx I amused myself by trying to follow the labyrinthine American political system. Delegates, super delegates, popular vote, Electoral College... crazy! The only reason I watch of course is because with Barack Obama we finally have a politician I enjoy picturing naked. Oh come on, Tom! Yes we can!

There is a definite lack of sex appeal in the Canadian political scene. The rare bit of beefcake that one sees in the House of Commons almost always comes with bovine intelligence as well. Of the party leaders, Jack Layton is pleasant enough looking but not really sexy. Gilles Duceppe is too intense and angry. Then there is the Prime Minister whose physical touch would probably give frost bite. Or Stéphane Dion who has all the charisma of day old porridge. It's discouraging.

Fortunately the warm weather has arrived which always revives my spirits. The other day I was so caught up in the sensual delights of spring that I nearly threw myself down on a green sward among the wild violets just to soak up the joyous feeling of renewal and growth. Till I remembered that my jacket was suede and my jeans were freshly washed and the moment passed. Oh, but I do love this time of year with the smell of new mown lawns, the burnt offerings on barbecue grills and the visual delight of young bare-chested joggers wearing those tiny silk shorts that sometimes seem to be whispering my name. Lots of other wonderful sounds too – peepers, bird song, the chatter of horny squirrels as they chase each other across tree tops. And, of course, that most soul satisfying sound of all: the sharp crack of an ice cube when you pour gin on it.

Love ya!

Northern AIDS Connection Society

By Al McNutt

The Northern AIDS Connection Society is getting prepared for their annual Art for AIDS Auction scheduled for June 2, 2008. This event will be held at the Best Western Glengarry Hotel. This initiative is yet another way of raising much needed awareness and necessary funds to deal with the ever increasing workload. If you are an artist or know of anyone wishing to make a donation for the main auction or the silent auction, please contact our office in Truro.

The HIV Family Support group just wrapped up and are presently dealing with evaluations and feedback. The one common concern was loneliness and isolation of those dealing with the loss of a loved one, especially when residing in a rural community. It is the Board and staff's hope to acquire funding to host a two-day camp for families sometime in 2009. This group was a very rewarding experience for the participants, staff and volunteers. The funding was provided by the Truro & Area Community Health Board. The Board of Directors would like to extend their sincere appreciation for this support.

The final details are being worked out to host our Transgendered Workshop. This initiative has been funded by Abbott Laboratories and will be a joint effort between Northern AIDS Connection and Denise Holliday from Maritime Transgendered Workplace Solutions. We hope to invite groups working directly with the Trans community and making a link with HIV/AIDS. Some groups we hope to attract are the AIDS Coalition of Nova Scotia, Healing Our Nations, Stepping Stone, the Atlantic Centre of Excellence for Women's Health, Dalhousie University, the Nova Scotia Advisory Commission on HIV/AIDS and more. Any enquiries should be made through our office.

Our partnership with the Halifax Sexual Health Centre to provide HIV Anonymous testing in the Truro area started in April. We are hoping that this initiative will add to the broad range of services offered at our Truro location. It is the intent of Northern AIDS Connection to advocate for a similar service to be offered in the Pictou and Cumberland County areas.

The staff has been extremely busy applying for funding to hire a summer AIDS Walk for Life Coordinator. Preparations are already getting started towards strengthening our sites in Truro, New Glasgow and Amherst and we hope to have an additional site in the Elmsdale area this September.

The Northern AIDS Connection Society is active as a key partner in the organizing and promotion of the week long Diversity Event to be held in Colchester County. Our organization is making plans to host an event "The Life & Times of Janet Connors." We hope this will be well attended. During this week there will be a whole range of activities and events scheduled throughout the communities in the Colchester area.

The Open House and Healthy Decision Making Fair are being postponed until the fall.

For enquiries or information please contact us at 902-895-0931 or by email at nacs@eastlink.ca. Our address is 33 Pleasant Street, Truro, N.S. B2N 3R5.

Gay Men's Health

Read This... Literally!

By Angus Campbell
Many years ago my best friend from high school bought me "The Joy of Gay Sex" for my birthday. I was thrilled. Unfortunately, my dad wasn't when he found it in my bedroom, and promptly destroyed it without my knowledge. "When you're in my house you live by my rules," he said. I moved out shortly thereafter.

Things have changed a lot since that day, and so have gay men's health issues, especially sexual health. So last week I bought myself a belated birthday present: "The Advocate Guide to Gay Men's Health and Wellness," by Frank Spinelli, M.D. The book is informative, fun, and necessary for all gay men, especially for those over 35.

This guide includes sections on everything: Coming Out to your Doctor, the Gay Male Physical Exam, Sexual Compulsion and Addiction, the Male Pap Smear, and more. Dr. Frank includes lots of tips, such as relationship tips (talk, listen, boundaries, expectations, outcomes) and many personal experiences. My favourite is the following:

"The first time I encountered a patient with an irretrievable foreign object was on a quiet Friday night in the E.R. A male nurse named Paul woke me up in the call room and handed me the chart with a Cheshire cat grin. Staring at the diagnosis, Paul had written F.O. (foreign object) with a smiley face in the O. 'That's right doll face,' he said. 'You're on.'"

Inside the GYN room I found Robert, a 35 year old male lying on the exam table huddled in the fetal position moaning quietly. He had inserted a dildo into his rectum four hours earlier and was unable to remove the object. After performing a rectal exam, I was able to palpate the tip of the base of this dildo. I instructed Paul to administer some sedation in order to relax the patient, and after 15 minutes of prolonged steady traction, I was able to remove it. As I fell back onto the floor with the dildo on my lap, Paul exclaimed, 'It's a boy!'"

Although this book was written primarily for an American audience, it's still valid in Canada. I showed it to a gay friend of mine who is a nurse but he said he had no interest in reading it. Half an hour later I asked him to go buy his own copy as I wanted mine back! Available at Venus Envy for $24.95.

Income & Food Security for Nova Scotia PHAs

By Larry Baxter and Jennifer Heatley, Nova Scotia Advisory Commission on AIDS
The ability to meet life's most basic needs is a constant struggle for many people living with HIV/AIDS (PHAs) in Nova Scotia.

"You are always weighing off one choice against another," says one PHA, commenting on the fact that many PHAs must choose between purchasing food and paying for rent or for other items such as electricity.

Focus groups conducted with PHAs in 2006 for the Nova Scotia Advisory Commission on AIDS (the Commission) explored income support as a quality of life issue facing PHAs. The consequences can be detrimental to health, resulting in high levels of stress, living situations that may be unhealthy and/or unsafe and poorer nutrition. Proper nutrition is often sacrificed in the face of meeting other basic needs such as shelter.

For another perspective on nutrition, Commission Chair, Larry Baxter, and another Commissioner participated in the 2007 food costing survey done by the Nova Scotia Food Security Network, in conjunction with Mount Saint Vincent University and the Nova Scotia Department of Health Promotion and Protection. The results released in late April show that the average cost of a basic nutritious diet for a family of four in NS in 2007 was $648.33 per month. This means that approximately 120,000 Nova Scotians cannot afford to eat this basic nutritious diet.

For a single male the sample food basket was $223.13. For optimal health, people living with HIV/AIDS require a high protein nutritious diet which will cost even more than this basic food basket. The affordability analysis indicated that this lone male on provincial Social Assistance at the base level would have a monthly deficit of $217.39. However, recipients with health issues can apply annually and may qualify for up to $150 a month for dietary supplements.

The dilemma of balancing income, nutrition and housing became even more evident when the results from a Housing and HIV study by the Ontario HIV Treatment Network were reviewed recently with researchers in Halifax. Housing related security, supports and stress have a significant impact on the physical and psychological health of PHAs.

Under the umbrella of the provincial Strategy on HIV/AIDS the Commission will add these research findings into its ongoing analysis and discussion of income, food and housing security with the Department of Community Services and other government

For the Love of a Queen

By Graham North

Part I
Nothing I haven't seen before, she thought. I can do this.

The spotlight in Eureka Love's eyes was blinding, and although she couldn't see the audience at Reflections Cabaret, she could feel the scrutiny in their eyes judging her every move.

Eureka was filling in as the host of Five Minutes of Fame, a weekly event that attracts Halifax's finest drag queen talent to compete for bragging rights and $200 in cash. The regular host, legendary drag queen Lulu LaRude, was away in Edmonton headlining a fundraiser for the annual Loud 'N' Queer extravaganza. Eureka had only ever dressed in drag once before—for Halloween, which every real queen knows does not count. Now she was expected to perform multiple routines in front of a mob of drag veterans.

No pressure, she tried to convince herself. Yeah, right.

The crowd was silent as they watched the rookie wobble onto the stage. A sharp eye might have picked up a strangely confident smirk in the corner of Eureka's mouth, but most of the audience only watched the shaky steps of an inexperienced drag queen.

Before she began, Eureka Love glanced down past her quivering knees and stared at her feet, and it occurred to her again whose stilettos she was trying to fill.

There's no other way to put it: Lulu LaRude is the Queen of Queens.

Even after death.

For 25 years, Chuck Gillis was the undisputed face of Halifax's budding drag scene. He created Lulu LaRude, a flirtatious, curvaceous and sassy woman with a presence that demanded attention. She exuded an aura of royalty.

Lulu personified the expression, "larger than life." The 43-year-old Caper stood comfortably taller than six feet with a bulky, solid frame. In six-inch heels, Lulu towered above her drag kingdom, waltzing gracefully with every step. In every way, the drag community looked up to her. She was an unstoppable force.

You only need to talk to a couple of Lulu's friends to understand that unstoppable is not an exaggeration—it's an understatement. Lulu was once walking home from a show in Edmonton in full drag when five guys jumped her in a parking lot. She didn't even bother to take her heels off as she pummelled all five of her befuddled attackers. "I won't start a fight," says Lulu, "But I sure as hell won't lose one."

Lulu LaRude had been a drag queen since she was 17 years old, at which point she burst onto the unsuspecting Edmonton scene. Her passion, charisma and attention to detail distinguished her from the few drag queens in Alberta in 1982. She cared about every step, every movement, and every lyric from every song. Her alter ego, Chuck, was a successful makeup artist, and he helped bring a realistic and natural look to Lulu's character. Stephen Filek, the manager of Reflections, says Chuck "could do anything. Give him a hot glue gun and he'd have an outfit in 10 minutes."

always made it her duty to make sure everyone was having a good time. She wasted no time on negativity.

When Lulu was bubbly, the crowd had a wonderful time. When she was mad, it was even better. For the Queen of Queens, the stage was her kingdom. "Get the fuck off my stage!" she ordered one audience member who made the unthinkable mistake of walking across her stage, then throwing a beer bottle. Within seconds, Lulu had picked up the bottle and whipped it right back at him. The audience erupted in cheers as the bouncers kicked the offender out of the bar. Queen Lulu simply returned to her throne.

The fire of life in Lulu LaRude was not fuelled by anger or contempt, however. It was purely passion. She loved her kingdom and the elegant craft it represented. Lulu's grace was mystifying for her overbearing physique, her moments smooth and exacting.

She can't be a man... can she?

To many, she was an angel. A fabulous, foul-mouthed angel.

And Five Minutes of Fame gave her wings.

So when Eureka Love—the rookie—stumbled clumsily onto the Reflections stage in the omnipresent shadow of Lulu LaRude, the pressure was suffocating.

"Oh, I'll just put on a wig and it'll be no problem," she had always joked.

Not quite.

Somewhere beyond the glare of the spotlight, the eyes of Halifax's premier queens—renowned for their cattiness—were following Eureka's every move.

But Eureka was ready.

The confident smirk in the corner of her mouth widened into a stunning smile as Eureka soared off the stage and hung slow-motion in the air. She landed impeccably in her pumps on the ground below, then immediately tore into Lulu's flagship song, "Cotton Fields":

When I was a little bitty baby
My mama done rock me in the cradle

In them old cotton fields back home

The fast-paced notes churned out of the speakers and drifted into the ears and open mouths of the host's dumbfounded audience. In Lulu's classic outfit of black corset, grey skirt and purple shrug, Eureka pranced around the stage with ease.

Two weeks of practicing in heels had paid off.

By her second number, Eureka had washed herself of apprehension and found her groove. She slipped into "black drag"; a transition that requires the queen to dust her face and arms with black powder on top of the makeup. Eureka would later learn that it's much easier (and far less messy) to pull black nylon leggings over your arms, but tonight it didn't matter.

What's a little black powder? Eureka Love had shocked the drag world.

That was the beginning; so easy, so fun.

But Eureka never could have prepared herself for how much harder it would become when Lulu LaRude asked her to do the unthinkable...

"It's one thing to do drag," Lulu would say, "but it's another thing to make it look easy."

"It's one thing to do drag," Lulu would say, "but it's another thing to make it look easy." From head to toe, Lulu LaRude made it look easier than anyone in the business.

You could feel her in the room, says a close friend, even if she wasn't talking, and even if she wasn't in drag. She boosted everyone's spirit. She laughed the loudest, smiled the biggest and

Healing Our Nations: The Atlantic First Nations AIDS Network

By Gabe Saulnier

Healing Our Nations (HON) is a not for profit Aboriginal HIV/AIDS which serves the Atlantic region: Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island. HON was also known as "The Atlantic First Nations AIDS Task Force" and changed to the current HON several years ago. We are located at Suite 3, 15 Alderney Drive, Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, B2Y 2N2. Office hours are from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday. We have a toll free number, 1 (800) 565-4255. We do not have caller ID and your calls are confidential. Our email address is hon@accesswave.ca and our website is www.hon93.ca.

As part of our services, we offer free workshops to your First Nation/Aboriginal community or organization. We also offer cross-cultural training for mainstream organizations. All you need to do is call us and book a time for your workshop. We offer workshops ranging from a couple of hours to a full week.

Our workshops are as follows: AIDS 101; Hep C 101; Sexually Transmitted Infections; HIV/AIDS and Aboriginal Women; HIV/AIDS and Aboriginal Youth; Caring for Aboriginal Persons Having AIDS; The Reality of Crystal Meth; Empowering Aboriginal Women—Moving Forward; Step by Step—A Community Response to HIV/AIDS; Gender and Sexuality; and Cross-Cultural Training.

All these workshops are delivered to your group, community or organization in a manner respectful of traditional ways.

Healing Our Nations staff currently consists of Monique Fong (Executive Director), Theresa Morris (Community Health Educator for Nova Scotia and Newfoundland), Gabe Saulnier (Community Health Educator for New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island), and Pete Adema (Accounting and Information Technology). Alison Lloy, a former social work placement, is a research assistant with HON.

If you have any questions about HIV or AIDS, do not hesitate to call our office anytime at the toll-free number above. If you get the answering machine, please leave us a message and we will get back to you. Feel free to drop by our office—we would love to give you a tour.

Fundraising

HON has a fundraising project on the go, called "Making a difference one nickel at a time." For some time, HON has had an Aboriginal Persons Living with HIV/AIDS (APHA) Fund, a fund which helps members of Healing Our Nations with buying food supplements, vitamins, and medications. If you are an Aboriginal person living with HIV and have a valid status card, you can get a monthly cheque to help you. Unfortunately, the bank balance is extremely low, and HON and the APHA's rely on fundraising to maintain a balance in this account. As a fundraiser, we are asking you to save your pop cans, returnable bottles, and juice containers, return them to your local Enviro Depot and donate the funds to the APHA Fund. We are counting on you to help our APHAs! If you have any questions do not hesitate to contact Gabe Saulnier at 1 (800) 565-4255.

Refresh your HIV/AIDS knowledge

HIV stands for the Human Immunodeficiency Virus. AIDS stands for Acquired Immuno-Deficiency Syndrome. You have to have HIV before you get AIDS. AIDS is a collection of illnesses that you get because you have HIV. There is no cure for HIV/AIDS. Anyone can HIV/AIDS: it does not just affect gay men and it's not found only in big cities.

Every day, more and more of Aboriginal people become infected with HIV. Right now, it is estimated that over 500 Aboriginal people a year get infected with HIV. Many people do not even know they are infected with the virus and unknowingly pass it on by having unsafe sex or sharing needles. The infection rate among Aboriginal people is estimated to be 7 times higher in the Aboriginal community than in mainstream society.

You can get HIV from having unprotected anal, vaginal or oral sex, sharing drug needles, or coming in direct contact with infected blood. If you are pregnant, you can pass it on to your unborn child.

You cannot HIV from hugging, dry kissing, holding hands, using the toilet, using dishes, from water fountains or swimming in a pool. You cannot tell by looking at someone if they have HIV or AIDS, the only way you can find out is by having an HIV test. This test can be done at your local hospital or if you are near a city, there may be anonymous testing offered there.

Raising The Bar

Menz & Mollyz Relocated, Renovated, Reinvented

By Angus Campbell
By the time this goes to press, the new Menz Bar and Mollyz Diner should be open, barring any inspection problems from the city. Doug, David and crew have been working long and hard, and their efforts are evident everywhere. The new venue is extremely spacious, interesting and inviting.

"It's taken much longer for us to re-build, re-invent and re-create, but the wait has definitely been worth it. I'm proud to be working towards making Halifax's community the envy of any other city," says Doug Melanson co-owner.

The dance floor and bar account for only a third of the place. Well appointed VIP lounges, already nicknamed the Head Room and the Tail Room, are available for private functions, and there are two separate dining rooms. As you can see from the floor plan, there are so many rooms, you'll be aMAZed (pa-dum-pum).

I don't want to spoil any surprises by describing the new decor, because I suggest you experience it firsthand, room by room. But if you're one who can't wait, check out www.menzbar.ca and scroll halfway down the page for a number of photos. On my most recent tour it was obvious Doug is really proud of their new baby. And so he should be. They haven't just moved down the street, they've created an exciting new space for Halifax's Rainbow Community and visitors.

I'll always have fond memories of the old spot, and I'm really looking forward to making new ones at 2182 Gottingen Street. I once read on a menu that "good food takes time to prepare" ... and so do good establishments! Congratulations to the Menz and Mollyz team!

Chef's Corner

Now that spring feels like it is here to stay, it's time to fire up the back yard grill and invite friends over for fabulous cook out. This recipe has become a family favourite. It works great on pork, beef or chicken and keeps for up to a month in a sealed container in the fridge. The secret to great BBQ ribs is a good dry rub, time for them to marinate, a long slow, low heat cooking process and of course a kick ass BBQ sauce. You will want to make sure your covered grill is heated to and maintained at 275°F and have 3 hours worth of propane. Give the raw ribs a generous coating of the dry rub, wrap them tightly in plastic wrap and let marinate in the fridge overnight or for up to 24 hours. Place the ribs racks meaty side up and let them slow roast for 2 – 2 1/2 hours, then turn them over, baste the underside with the sauce, let it bake for another 10 minutes, then turn them over and repeat the same process to the other side twice. And there you have it, perfect fall of the bone BBQ ribs. Happy grilling! In next month's issue we will be cooking lobster.

Sundowner Ubuntu – A Russell Quant Mystery

Anthony Bidulka
Toronto: Insomniac Press, 2007
ISBN:978-1-897178-43-0

www.insomniacpress.com
Review by Gary Brooks
Widowed by the death of her corner store-owning husband and surprised by her new wealth, Clara Ridge approaches Saskatoon private investigator Russell Quant to see if he can find her son Matthew. Twenty years earlier he'd been kicked out of the home by a father fed up with his son's continuing trouble with the law that had ended up in a stint in reform school. There had been no contact since. Now Mathew's mother wanted Quant to "find him—tell me where he is, what his life has become, where he lives, where he works and then...well, then I'll decide what to do. Maybe... maybe I'll just send him some money anonymously. All I know for sure is that I want to know if my son is alive or dead. And if he's alive, I'm going to help him."

Bidulka is an experienced writer—this is the fifth in the Russell Quant series of mystery/adventures—and it's apparent from the first three lines. Fast-paced, somewhat slick (but in a positive sense) this is not an easy book to put down. As in the previous

Grilled Baby Back Ribs with Sweet Onion and Molasses BBQ Sauce

1/4 tsp ground cloves
1 tsp mustard powder
1 cup crushed pineapple with juice
1 cup Sake (rice wine)

books in the series, Quant's search takes him far from Saskatoon, this time to southern Africa where he learns about Ubuntu, the intense sense of community that allowed South African blacks to survive in the townships: "I am what I am because of who we all are."

The characters in Sundowner Ubuntu are deftly drawn, with even the minor characters coming to life in distinctively individual ways. The detective Quant is gay and is involved in a relatively new relationship, although there is little in the book that is explicitly sexual. The novel won't be the first choice of those who look for detailed descriptions of sexual couplings.

My first reaction in reaching the end of this book was to head to my computer to find how to get a hold of the four earlier books in the series—as high a compliment as I can think of for a new-to-me author.

Crossing Borders

By Will Carr
GLB Publishers

www.glb-pubs.com

Review by Ralph Higgins

In 1953, Will Carr, a twenty-seven year old gay

Jewish man leaves his safe but dull life in New York to seek adventure in Europe. Travelling alone, he purchases a tiny Renault in Paris which will be his home and companion for the next several months as he heads south into Italy and then onto all the countries bordering the Mediterranean. Carr has set out on a voyage of discovery, propelled not just by a desire to see the world but also by the need to give himself the time and distance to explore his inner world. The borders of the title refer not just to those manmade lines that divide one country from another but also the parameters of secrets that we all carry. In Carr's case the fact that he is Jewish is a secret he prudently does not reveal in the Middle East less than a decade after the creation of the state of Israel. His homosexuality, on the other hand, is a secret too long kept hidden and one he longs to share with another man.

Crossing Borders is the vivid, colourful account of both those journeys from his first romantic tryst in Rome to the unexpected adventures and friendships that dotted every stage of this rite of passage. Carr tells his story with frankness and a kind of wide-eyed wonder, sharing his fond memories of this stage of his life and of the young man he once was. Curious incidents could not shake his youthful optimism and faith in the basic kindness of people. It was often his very innocence that kept him safe in circumstances that only in retrospect did he realize were dangerous.

More than a fascinating travelogue, Cross Borders is a moving glimpse into the life of a gay man almost twenty years before Stonewall, a great addition to the understanding of our history.

Camping News

By Jane Murrigan

With the arrival of the Spring Equinox this weekend, I felt it was a good time to get in touch with you to let you know that The Mermaid & The Cow Campground will be opening earlier this year (June 13), and to introduce you to my brand new website which will give you lots of information and hopefully will get you thinking about visiting the campground once again this coming summer!

On the website, I have added a drawing of the layout of the campsites, and soon you'll be able to make reservations online using PayPal. The nightly rate for a campsite has not increased since last year (it's still $25 for 1-2 adults), and I have adjusted the seasonal rates for the longer season. The address is www.themermaid-andthecow.ca.

My plan is to stay in touch with you periodically throughout the year with this newsletter, so that you are up-to-date with developments at the campground and have all the pertinent information easily at hand.

I hope that you are well and happy, and I look forward to welcoming you once again to The Mermaid & The Cow Campground this summer!

All the best, and cheers,
Jane

Deadly Vision

By Rick R. Reed

Regal Crest Enterprises, LLC www.regalcrest.biz

Review by Ralph Higgins

In Deadly Vision, Rick R. Reed has taken the Cassandra story and given it the plot twists and touches of horror his readers have come to expect from this prolific and popular author.

Cass D'Angelo is a struggling single mother in a small Ohio town who is bored, lonely, and worn from facing her mother's steady disappointment and disapproval. The one bright spot in this twilight life is her young son, Max. When Max goes missing during a sudden thunderstorm, Cass begins a frantic search. A branch from a lightning struck tree knocks her unconscious and changes her life. Waking in the hospital, Cass begins having visions about two local girls who have gone missing. She is frightened by this newfound ability and further horrified by her intuitive knowledge that there is a serial killer on the loose. As in the Greek myth, no one believes Cass and she, herself, curses her new abilities and the contact with evil they have brought her. But, when a flash of insight shows her that the killer has now turned his focus on her family, Cass realizes she must trust in her new abilities to find the killer before he can strike again.

Reed demonstrates again his ability to reveal the inner longings that animate our daily lives as well as what can happen when those same drives become warped into something inhuman. Deadly Vision is a tale told with persuasive logic and a steady building of intensity that will have you turning pages late into the night—after drawing the curtains and double checking the lock on the door.

Is AA / NA for Gays and Lesbians?

By Hugh C

Last month's article on sex and drugs may have given readers the impression that Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) or Narcotics Anonymous (NA) is not welcoming to gays and lesbians, but this would be a misconception. These fellowships are welcoming to anyone who wants to deal with an addiction problem regardless of race, gender or sexual identity. A gay specific group could, however, be helpful to deal with specific issues surrounding some unique aspects of gay culture—particularly connections between drugs and sex—and it would supplement rather than compete with any existing groups.

Unless you've gone to AA or NA you may not understand what its about. It is simply a fellowship of people who want to deal with a problem in their lives. It is non-professional and not affiliated with any other groups to keep the central focus, which is addicts helping addicts live a better life with drugs or alcohol. Principles incorporated within the 12 steps of AA or NA include: admitting there is a problem; seeking help; engaging in a thorough self-examination; confidential self-disclosure; making amends for harm done; and helping other addicts who want to recover.

Central to the both programs is an emphasis on practicing spiritual principles. AA and NA are non-religious, and each member is encouraged to cultivate an individual understanding—religious or not—of this process of personal change and growth. Learning to accept help from addicts openly and honestly sharing their intimate good and bad times is a powerful spiritual experience with no connection to religion. Members are free to accept anything as their source of proper direction, as long as they are willing to change behaviours that lead to using, be honest and keep an open mind—some members joke a teacup is ok if it works. Regardless, the main thing about the program is "it works if you work it."

Do you think you might have an addiction problem: drugs or alcohol? Some questions to ask yourself are: Do you ever use alone?

Have you ever manipulated or lied to a doctor to obtain prescription drugs? Do you regularly use a drug when you wake up or when

Have you ever used a drug without knowing what it was or what it would do to you?

you go to bed? Do you avoid people or places that do not approve of you using? Have you ever used a drug without knowing what it was or what it would do to you? Do you feel you need drugs to feel good, fit in, or party?

Addiction is a progressive disease that is accompanied by denial of the problem. Addicts usually feel others are the problem and they can stop using whenever people, places or things change. The addiction starts slowly and it's frequently difficult to tell its happening. If you think you might have a problem, just drop a note to gaynans@hotmail.com—all inquiries will be answered and kept entirely confidential. If you're thinking about attending a meeting to see what its about, you'll be welcomed with no strings attached. Meetings of both AA and NA occur daily in Metro Halifax and in many areas around Atlantic Canada. To find them, just type "Alcoholics Anonymous" or "Narcotics Anonymous" and your location into Google and you should find a meeting list easily.

Pride? Necessary?

By Randall Perry

Once again June has rolled around, time for that alcohol-fuelled marketing juggernaut called Pride. Christmas in June—and July, August and maybe September, depending on where you live—for naughty and nice queers everywhere, when the price of everything from rainbow trinkets to hotel rooms suddenly goes through the roof.

It's also time for the annual "whither Pride?" debate. Why do we have parades and put ourselves on display like that? Why are Pride parades full of freaky-looking people—leather men with their asses hanging out of their chaps, bitchy drag queens, butch dykes and (insert favourite icky queer stereotype here)? Why can't "normal-looking" people march in these parades so the cameras can show the real us? We have same-sex marriage now, so is Pride even necessary anymore? I've been asked all these questions and more, and every year I give the same answer: "Yes, Pride is necessary." And then I explain.

Pride was born from the need to protest—the Stonewall bar raids in 1969 in New York and, to a Canadian extent, the Toronto bathhouse raids in 1981—and protest we did, right out in the city streets, some with faces to the sun, others with paper bags over their heads. We encountered hostility and drew cheers; in many cases we just drew curious onlookers. We had everything to lose, so we marched and protested to minimize our losses and attempt to correct the inequalities that existed in laws and minds. Some of us did lose: our families, our jobs, our homes. Some of us lost our lives.

But we stared to gain. Little things, here and there... small victories, eventually leading to one of movement's holy grails, marriage—in Canada, at least. We've gained not because of Pride itself,

There are those who would, if given the chance, gladly march us off to the gas chambers or burn us at the stake.

but because Pride has helped to give us the extraordinary strength required for us to put in the long hours on the telephone and in the meeting rooms and on the organizing committees. Pride—both the idea and the practice—gives us a shot in the arm (and a kick in the ass) to continue the fight.

The reasons and motivations behind Pride have changed with our gains. However, we must continue the work. By no means can we as a community of queer individuals think that just because we've hit the mainstream in some areas of life everyone now loves us. A marriage license, some non-discrimination clauses and a few un-closeted characters on television will not stop homophobic municipal councillors from changing flag-flying policies, nor will they quash hateful comments in the letters to the editor section of the newspaper or fundamentally change the intrinsic homophobic attitudes that still exist in our society. There are those who would, if given the chance, gladly march us off to the gas chambers or burn us at the stake.

We must stick together. That means all of us, from the stereotypes to the archetypes. Effeminate gay men and mannish lesbians exist just as surely as those invisible queers who "pass," and Pride brings us all together as one fabulous, freaky, fucked-up, fun family. We empower and draw strength from each other, despite our penchant for petty sibling rivalries. We all don't have to like each other, but we are all engaged in attaining the same goal of equality for all.

Pride is necessary, if only to celebrate what we've achieved and brainstorm ideas for what we want to achieve in the future. The time to protest may be in the past and we have different sensibilities in 2008. Whatever the reason, we've earned the party.

All Bluenose Queers Deserve to Celebrate

By Gerard Veldhoven

As summer descends on Nova Scotia, a number of communities in our fair province will be out in full force to celebrate Pride week. For a few years now the queer population in towns and counties across the province have enjoyed the support of their community councils. There is much to celebrate, to be sure. Generally, the outcomes have been positive. Pride week will be proclaimed, rainbow flags will be hoisted and some Pride parades will certainly enhance the town and city streets with colourful displays. This is how it should be. However, all is not well in Bluenose country.

Nova Scotia's queer population is well aware of news items during the past year, as the meaning of diversity is totally ignored. The outbursts by Truro mayor, Bill Mills, still ring vivid in our minds today. Antigonish and Pictou counties strongly denounced equal treatment of the GLBT communities by not allowing the Pride flag to fly on government property. Rhetoric bordering on hate was the order of the day. Papers were signed to deny any support whatsoever by town and municipal officials. The question is this: what fosters such intolerance and why does the queer community deserve such outrageous treatment? The answer is obvious: the fight must continue.

Those areas lucky enough to have garnered support from officials must band together to assist in any way in order to end this terrible fiasco. Our nation has spoken and entrenched in the laws of Canada that members of the GLBT community are protected from discrimination. Equal marriage is the order of the day, as is equal opportunity, as is equal treatment. Some town and county officials seem to think they are above these laws. A pure display of arrogance.

We must fix this breakdown. The queer community must unite and speak with one voice. If we fail to do that, then we fail our queer brothers and sisters in their effort to gain dignity and respect. Unity is unbelievably valuable in gaining ground.

So, when we begin our celebrations let's not forget those who are unable to publicly raise the Pride flag. We must all get involved and continue the fight.

Sex, Laws and Harperism

By Kevin Kindred

You probably didn't notice, but on May 1 the Harper government gave gay men another kick in the rear.

That's the date when the government raised the age of consent for sex (or, as they'd prefer to rebrand it, the "age of protection") from 14 to 16. After 116 years, it seems the Conservatives thought it was time to "protect" more young people from the ability to consent to sexual intercourse.

I don't like this law, though, for two reasons.

First, in general, I think laws should accomplish something, other than making the Conservatives feel good about themselves. I was at the committee hearings into this law, and I didn't hear anything convincing me that the existing age of consent was a real barrier to protecting kids from sexual exploitation. Everything that should be illegal on that front pretty much is. We need more support for law enforcement, and more support for kids at risk—not more laws.

Changing the age of consent is a political solution, because it allows the government to look like their doing something when they're really not. And, it plays particularly well for the Conservatives. It satisfies their craving to legislate about sex and our private lives, without having to actually grapple with a complex social problem that might require spending tax money on useful social programs. As a bonus, it avoids the need to engage young people in the solution and thus—horrors!—acknowledge them as maturing sexual creatures.

Secondly—and the real reason I was at the Committee hearings—the Harper government ignored calls from activists to finally, finally remove the special laws targeting anal intercourse.

Did you even know that the Criminal Code says anal intercourse is illegal? In my experience, most don't. We've been sold the story that Pierre Trudeau took the state out of the bedrooms of the nation, and legalized gay sex.

That's part of the story, but not the whole story. In reality, Trudeau's government was able to put some major limits on the criminalization of homosexuality, but not to eliminate them completely. After 1967, the Criminal Code still said that "buggery" was illegal. But there were now defences which excused the crime when committed by two adults over the age of 21, if there were no others present. Svend Robinson tackled this issue in the 80's, and could only get the age lowered to 18, where it stands today.

So the Criminal Code allows you to have sex at 16, anywhere that isn't a public place—unless you get the butt involved. Then, it's 18; and "public" suddenly means anywhere with more than two people—even your own bedroom.

Sound discriminatory? Courts in Ontario, Quebec, BC, Alberta, and here in Nova Scotia have told us so, since gay men are clearly targeted, though they certainly aren't the only ones having anal intercourse. In the Nova Scotia case, the accused had to make his own arguments on the issue in front of the Court of Appeal (though NSRAP was able to provide some support).

And yet, with all that history, when the Harperites decided to finally "modernize" the age of consent, they conveniently ignored the anal intercourse law. Groups ranging from the Canadian Bar Association to Egale Canada to medical organizations called on the government to correct that historical wrong, but they buried their heads in the sand.

Then, when we reached the Committee hearings, we were told that—oops!—since anal intercourse wasn't part of the Government's original bill, it was too late to make amendments. We were told, of course, that the government might choose to pass a law about this at some point in the future. I'm not holding my breath.

So, when it comes to "protecting" teenagers from sex, Harper is more than happy to get involved, even without evidence of effectiveness. But when it comes to protecting gay men from discrimination in the Criminal Code, the Conservatives are nowhere to be found.

Luckily, though, Stephen Harper's old enough to consent to having his own head up his ass.

Kevin Kindred is Chair of the Nova Scotia Rainbow Action Project

Last Month's Question

Our question was: "It's May! It's May! Outdoor sex starts today! Where is YOUR favourite place for outdoor sex? Why?" and we got a couple of delightful responses:

"Really? In May? Is this a scheduled event? I don't think I got the memo on that. So many choices but I'll have to say my back yard. Why? It's secluded, private and I already know where all the ants nests are!" and another: "Well - it's not quite outside, but I like my garage - then again, I have a thing for sweaty, dirty mechanics... :)"

This month's question

Can we keep Pride alive all year long? How?
